Traditional cormorant fishing along the Li River

This journey traces a path from the Chinese imperial power centers of the north to the ethereal landscapes and ancient water towns of the south. In the north, we witness the dynastic legacy of the Ming and Qing empires, whose golden-roofed palaces and sacred altars have stood as symbols of authority for centuries. As we travel south, our experiences shift toward China's deep connection with its iconic waterways. Along the banks of the Li and Yangtze rivers, culture is shaped by the dramatic limestone peaks and rural traditions that have inspired poets and scholars for generations. We have designed this tour to balance the grand scale of the Middle Kingdom with the intimate, lived experiences of today. From the quiet rituals of local families in Beijing's ancient alleyways to the vibrant energy of Shanghai's waterfront, you will connect with the people and traditions that define this enduring civilization.
